

More Soviet Aid for Ghana Soon

LONDON (Reuter) — The Soviet Union is continuing its policy of giving economic aid to developing countries, it was reported yesterday by a newspaper, forecasting that Ghana will receive immediate Soviet economic and financial aid.

The Ghanaian parliamentary delegation which has just returned from Moscow went home convinced that they can rely on "an immediate and substantial" Soviet economic and financial aid, the correspondent, Nira Duff, said.

The Moscow report said: "Already funds have agreed to buy 200,000 tons of sugar, Ghana's chief crop, and the negotiators said they would consider further purchases later this year. Only 18 per cent of the sugar is now being exported to the Soviet Union, the rest being sent to Britain.

Ghana has as yet received no Soviet assistance other than Ghana, which employs the services of about 1,000 Soviet technicians and has received a loan of $25m.

Talmudic Scholar Rabbi Koussevsky Dies at 87

The death occurred in Johannesburg, South Africa, of Haim Koussevsky, Talmudic scholar whose descendants of the Mishnah and Tosefta are in use in yeshivot throughout the world. He was 87.

Rabbi Koussevsky was born in Jerusalem. At an early age he became a fervent Zionist and an outspoken devotee of Hebrew as a living language.

In December, 1946, on the occasion of his 60th birthday, he became the eighth President of the City of Jerusalem.

On Wednesday, he was admitted to Sha'arei Zedek Hospital. He passed away at 4.30 on Sunday afternoon. He was fully conscious until the last moment.

He leaves a wife and nine children, two sons and five daughters.

The funeral procession will leave Sha'arei Zedek at 10 a.m. on Monday. Full details will be published on hearings on Monday morning.

Sabbath Traffic Banned In Jerusalem's Orthodox Qtrs.

Jerusalem Post Reporter
The Jerusalem Municipal Council on Sunday banned Sabbath traffic in half a dozen predominantly Orthodox quarters.

The quarters are Nachshon, Shmuel, Shlomo, Meir, Nachman, Meir, Yosef, and Meir. In addition, traffic will be diverted around the George Street during services. Details about are to be issued at the entrance to these quarters to warn drivers that the measure, introduced by the Ministry of Transport, will take effect on Saturday (the Sabbath, beginning at 8 p.m. U.S. Eastern Daylight Time) just to take under pressure the Law.

Dr. J. P. Jacob (Progressive) called the move a step towards the "gentilization" of the Capital, while Mr. A. Aron (Ahdut HaAvoda) voted for the measure, saying, "This is at least a step forward for the water system, our sewage system, our drainage system, and our roads."

Mr. S. H. Druck (Orthodox) voted against the measure, saying, "This is full for short of what was needed. He proposed that Sabbath traffic be allowed at only a few streets as exceptions to a general ban.

Development Budget — The coalition partners (Mapai, National Religious Party, Agudat Israel) supported the measure; Herut abstained.

The City also approved a budget of 1964/65. Development Budget, Mayor Meir Dizengoff, chairman, noted that it was possible that supplementary development budgets, for specific items like setting up a sewage purification plant, a new slaughter house, and a market, might still be drawn up this year for approval.

The Council also abolished the ceiling on the city tax collected when building lots are transferred by sale or lease. Hitherto, the tax has been calculated on outside the city boundaries of land by the city. The city tax will remain, but the rebate granted hitherto has been withdrawn. Mayor Abba Khoushi announced that in October he would introduce a proposal to bring the assessments up to date, and cited instances of fantastic increases in land values as a result of the city's development.

ARRIVALS — Mr. and Mrs. Irving Babb, of Milwaukee, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Fisch, of Green Bay, Wisconsin; and Mr. H. Danna, of Argentina — under auspices of the Israel-based Organization.

During his absence Mr. Yaakov Khamza, the present Deputy Director of Arab Programmes, will be Acting Director.

French Spy Finishes Jail Term, Expelled — Post Political Reporter

Joseph Monatou, who was released from jail on May 12 after serving seven years of a 10-year sentence for espionage, was last week expelled from Israel. The expulsion order was issued by the Minister of Interior, Mr. H. M. Shapiro.

Monatou, a Catholic and a French citizen, represented himself as a Jew when he came to this country in 1953. He joined the Druze forces, who, in his discharge, he came into contact with Syrian agents and crossed the lines several times. He was arrested in 1958 near Arish and found guilty of espionage.

Hatta Water Bills To Pay for Sewer

Jerusalem Post Reporter
Hatta — Local residents will have to pay a sum of 20 agorot for every cubic meter of water they use in their homes, as of the 15th of this month, as part of the water tariff. The new sewerage system has been installed here. A decision to this effect was adopted by the City Council last night.

Industrial, commercial and service establishments will pay an extra seven agorot for every cubic meter, if the water is disposed through the sewer system. The cost of the installation of the sewer system, by the way, is not subject to the new charge.

The Council also abolished the ceiling on the city tax collected when building lots are transferred by sale or lease. Hitherto, the tax has been calculated on outside the city boundaries of land by the city. The city tax will remain, but the rebate granted hitherto has been withdrawn. Mayor Abba Khoushi announced that in October he would introduce a proposal to bring the assessments up to date, and cited instances of fantastic increases in land values as a result of the city's development.

Councillor W. Lindemann (General Zionist) charged that Hatta housewives are paying more for their meat as a result of the monopolistic practices of the Yabed meat transport cooperative, which allegedly abused its monopoly to overcharge and to extort a sum from the butchers. Mr. Lindemann denied that Yabed held a city license, but added that the question of meat transportation was under investigation by a Government committee.

At the same session, the City Council approved a IL500,000 loan from the Ministry of the State (Ghosh) to Yabed. Yosef David Almali, chairman of the city, was presented with a gold emblem of the city by Mayor Ishay.

The session opened with Deputy-Mayor Meir Gevirtzman (N.R.P.) expressing his regret and condemning the action of a group of hoodlums who insulted Mayor Ishay during the presentation of the State (Ghosh) Year. Yosef David Almali) last week.

Tel Aviv to Clean Up Sidewalk Bazaars

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV — The Municipality is to rid the city of some 2,000 hawkers' vendors to "keep Tel Aviv from turning into one big Levantine souk."

This was announced by Deputy Mayor Meir Goldstein at the weekly meeting of the City Council last night. It was submitted that a draft by-law — the first order of the present council — of street markets and unlicensed hawkers.

Deputy Mayor Goldstein reported that only 800 of the hawkers were licensed and that 12 street markets were in operation. Under the proposed by-law, the City council will be limited to those persons who were unit for productive work. Licenses would be issued on the basis of a "means test." Mr. Goldstein announced.

The City would also put up three central markets to which hawkers not licensed operating in Rehov HaCanaa, the Hasidim Quarter and Rehov Levinsky would be transferred, he announced.

Dan Area Has Enough Water for Time Being

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV — Only general water economies will be introduced in the Dan Area for the time being, a spokesman of the Water Authority here told The Jerusalem Post on Tuesday. "No formal economy has been initiated at present," he declared when approached for comment on reports that water consumption would be strictly controlled within a short time.

The spokesman believed that sufficient savings could be achieved by making economies at the Ministry's administrative level. Immediate measures advocated by the Authority include prohibition of the use of wasteful sprinklers in all public buildings and a comprehensive check of the City's water-supply system.

Mr. A. A. Shabtai, spokesman of the Water Department, said that he would fight any further curtailments of the City's supply. He suggested that most of the anti-waste measures advocated by the Water Authority were already being implemented, while any new economies, while not to its overextended walls with a consequent risk of collapse.

He implied that the Municipality had been asked by the Water Authority to see its walls. This was, however, denied by the Water Authority spokesman.

Multi-Purpose Hall Built on Compromise

Global Acoustic Research Contributed to Unidibin Auditorium's Final Design

THIS public had its first look at the finished Unidibin Auditorium in Jerusalem's Bayit Hayim, at a solo concert given by the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra last night. The finished product, like most other architectural plans, was the result of many modifications of the original contest-winning blueprint, drawn up nearly 21 years ago by Heschel, Zarbitz, and Ravid. The long interruptions in building, due to the Jewish Agency's difficulties in finding funds, turned out to be something of a gain in that it enabled modern building developments, particularly in the field of acoustics, to be integrated. Mr. Morris Zarbitz, the young architect responsible for the designing, disclosed in the hall before the concert.

Dynamic Listener

Some of last night's audience will probably have noted something of this: one of the seats was taken by a strange listener, a tape-recording instrument, with a dynamic head complete with ears. This "piano" as he is called by the men on the job, will be seated in different parts of the hall during the next few concerts, and the results will be sent over to the firm of Heschel, Zarbitz, and Ravid for a final check.

The main problem which faced the architect of the auditorium was that it was to be a multi-purpose hall, for conventions as well as for concerts and stage performances. Mr. Zarbitz's first idea involved a room of 1,000 seats, a stage 100 feet long and maximum intelligibility acoustics, while music requires the opposite: considerable reverberation. There is also a conflict, less acute, regarding seating arrangements, and in this connection have been some difficulties. One solution, based on the original plan, was to have a large, open hall, with the front block of seats, for example, is calculated to seat the 500 or so delegates to Zionist Congresses. But there has been some effect on the design of the gallery. It was made to girdle the entire inside of the hall, right around, in contrast with a more dignified visitors to Zionist Congresses. The result is that the sides of the gallery, the equivalent of "boxes," give a restricted view of the stage and do not even dip toward it. However, as compensation, there are now fewer seats on the gallery sides than there were when there was improved seating.

Subdued Colours

The hall's subdued colour theme — ash, grey, and some very dark blue and aluminium touches — was aimed at creating a quiet atmosphere without distraction.

A final part of the Heschel's speech on completing the hall will not be given by the architect. Much of it lies in the space left between the ceiling and the roof, in a mass of equipment, ducts, suspension, control panels, pulleys and cables, at all angles and of all sizes.

Nobody seems to know when the roof of Unidibin's hall will be finished. It is expected to be between one and two years. The Jewish Agency can raise the necessary finances, about IL 1.5m. to IL 2m. still in their own state are the building's exterior, the foyers, the small hall, parking lots, and the grounds, which will be landscaped. The architects request it will take three years to complete this work if the funds were available. They point out that the dirt brought in from the rough ground outside does no good to the hall.

More Parking

As regards parking, there is now room at the east side of the building for about 60 cars and 100 carts, and on the north side, further to the west side, formerly the grounds of the Technion Auditorium Exhibition, for about 50 to 60 buses. This is enough room, the architect declares, but it is hoped to make certain improvements by next December's Zionist Congress.

As frequently stated, the hall was not designed for performances by the theatre companies. It is possible to reduce the size of the hall by a collapsible partition, say, the architect, but it would cost about IL 200,000.

The hall's interior was completed in eight months, though fittings and equipment were being produced in factories at six months' previous. The main contractor was Jerusalem Soleil Beach, the air-conditioning was installed by the Jerusalem branch of Herut; the electrical work, by Ziegler and Sharon of Tel Aviv; the seats were made by Markavim of Tel Aviv, the aluminium by Alibut of Haifa, the woodwork by Kibbutz Netzer Sereni, the carpet by Ratzon and Tannenbaum of Tel Aviv, and the public address system (for conventions only, no amplification will be required for concerts or recitals) by Israel Electra and by Eckstein, both of Haifa.

Completed Record

For a whole year they worked the "station," as they call their sites, by themselves. Then, feeling their knowledge giving out, they turned to another amateur station, Tel Aviv. In their sea shoes are but a deposit of Nile sand carried there by the sea, and underneath them there is fertile soil and the remains of prehistoric habitations. But thanks to the wind and rain these old sites can be and are constantly being found there by the team.

Skills Classified

From the start, the two brothers were meticulous in classifying and identifying every site and item found. Up to date, they have discovered, explored and indexed 81 new sites, 36 of them along the coast. Dressed in an outfit of their own invention — wearing heavy army boots — they often walk 20 miles during a day's work — and carry a 100-lb. knapsack to avoid a strained back — and make a quick sight as they move along against the desolate background, their eyes glued to the ground. In the Negev, a Beduin, after observing them for some time, approached them curiously, and, seeing them bent over for nothing but work, advised them to go and see a Kadi, as a discreet hint to their obviously unsound minds.

But far from being unbalanced, the team have become recognized experts in their field of research. They are now being called in for lectures by interested circles, and even for consultation by museums. Prof. Skolnik only put the official seal on their achievements.

The team's motto: "Seek, and ye shall find," has brought them success beyond their dreams. No. 62 on their list, in the vicinity of Nahal Lakhish (Qudsre), 600 metres from the sea shore, on a mound of six dunams, they found no less than 112 fire places of the Neolithic-Chalcolithic period, as well as more than 1,500 simple stone tools, some sickle blades, adzes, knives, and a large number of now scarce arrow heads.

BETWEEN the corals of the Red Sea, almost indistinguishable from them when not in motion, grow several species of huge anemones. Here in the Mediterranean we have sea anemones, but they are smaller. The tentacles especially are quite slender — when they are out, the whole thing really reminds you of a flower, though of a chrysanthemum rather than of an anemone. But their cousins in the Red Sea have tentacles the thickness of my finger, and about 10 inches long. I should judge they look sticky rather than hairy, as they move restlessly around in search of their obviously unsound minds.

The two friends have identical collections of enviable proportions, and Heschel, neatly laid out and labelled in lighted show cases, which give a casual visitor the impression of having entered the local museum by mistake.

Now these anemones sting like needles, only their poison can affect you, and when you feel or smell the poison within their grasp, it is stung and stung. There is one exception.

A brightly coloured little fish, striped vertically in turquoise and gold, smuggles down into the midst of the terrible tentacles as if in a feather bed and remains un-

Hoverscraft Shows Its Paces on The Thames

The Scandar Bee hovercraft is here now going through its paces on the Thames near the Houses of Parliament. The demonstration was for the benefit of M.P.s and was followed by an announcement that Vickers are to build a 55-ton short-haul ferry hovercraft and a bigger craft for cross-Channel type routes.

Crusade Against Accidents

COMMENTING on the steps being taken to stop death on our roads, Lamehers (Abud Ha'ad) scores the harmful generalization that the driver is the chief culprit, adding that it is unfair and not conducive to morale to blame a majority of hardworking and conscientious drivers for a few accidents.

As they gathered experience, their discrimination grew. They decided to limit their activities to the coastal plain, the shifting sand dunes between Zichron Ya'akov and Ashkelon, because it was a hitherto unexplored region, and because of its comparative nearness to their homes. According to one theory, the Neolithic culture spread from the sea, and the sea shore is but a deposit of Nile sand carried there by the sea, and underneath them there is fertile soil and the remains of prehistoric habitations. But thanks to the wind and rain these old sites can be and are constantly being found there by the team.
